Confuse of Dev or Ops? Simple rule: if you are praise for Web site success, you are Dev; if you are blame when Web site down, you are Ops.

TL;DR

DevOps is an artefact of design of operations

Culture change

Not tool buying or hiring

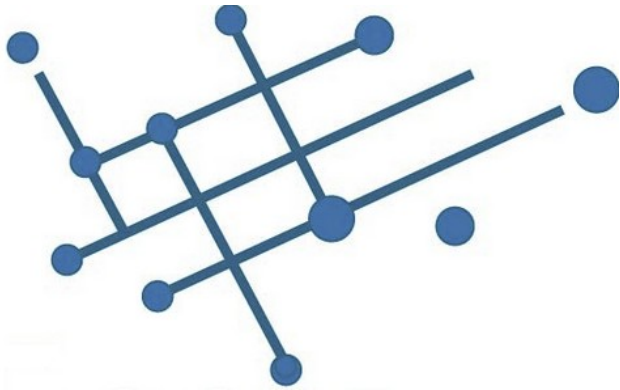

Your organisation should be aspiring to DevOps

Your help will be needed to get there

Automation is key

Continuous integration to continuous delivery

Why me?

What do I mean by 'DevOps'?

Industrial design maturity - cars

Design for operations

Design for manufacture

Design for purpose

Industrial design maturity - software

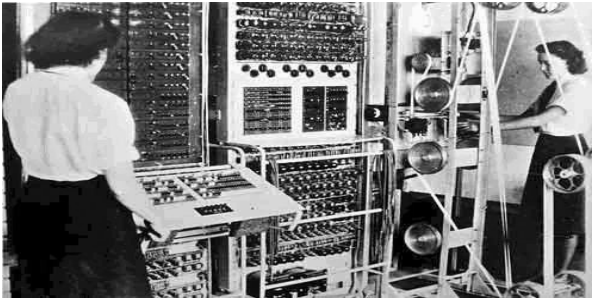

Design for operations

DevOps is an artefact

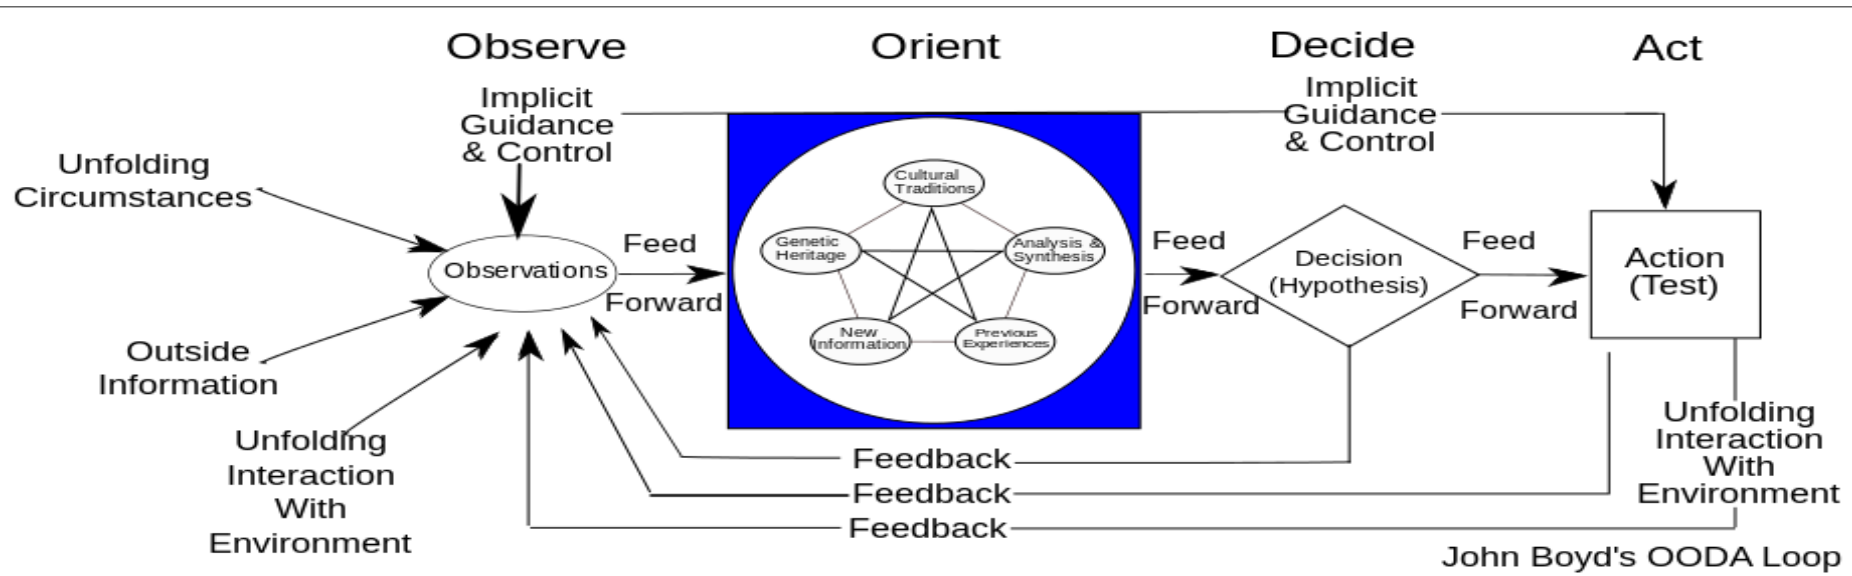

Design for manufacture

Design for purpose

DevOps is not not ITIL

DevOps is not

And it's also not

Throwing away change control

Allowing developers access to production

Inherently less secure

Destroying segregation of duties

Cost reduction

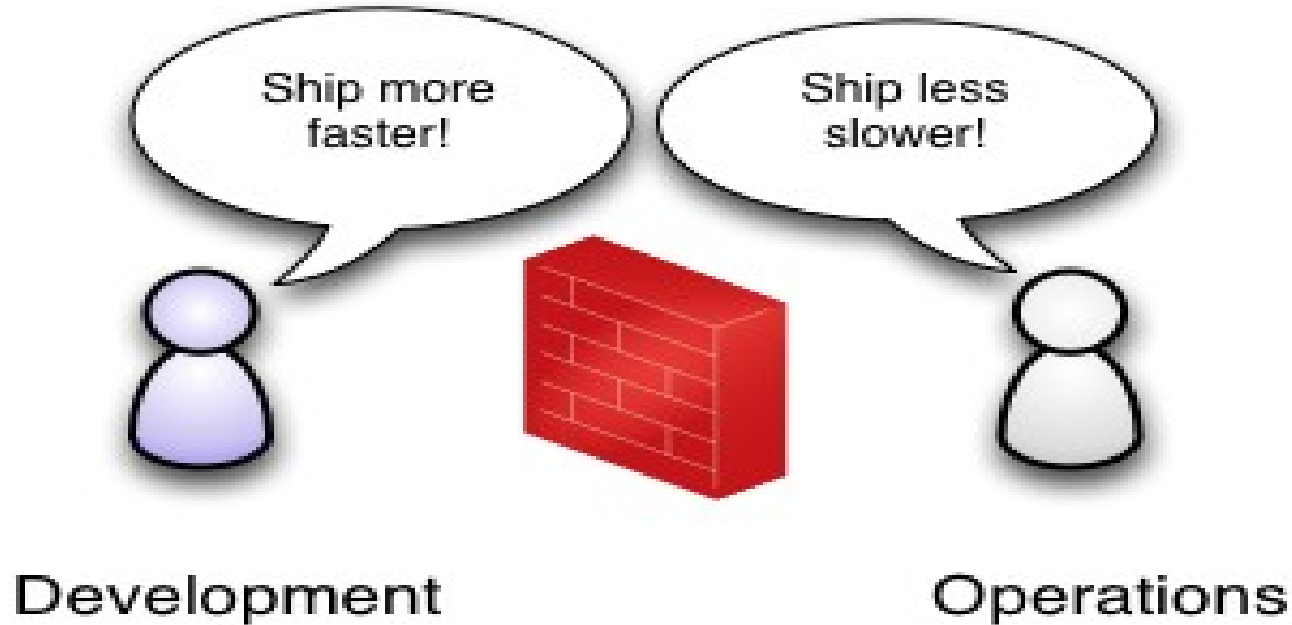

Headcount savings

A Grue that will eat your job

Culture change is hard

Is this your organisation?

Culture (defn)

The way we do things
around here

Which is different from

THE WAY WE
AROUND HERE

Culture change is hard

‘and then it took out the trade floor’

“Most companies are built out of scar tissue”

“Scar tissue includes processes, rules, the HR manual, the whole waterfall idea. Scar tissue prevents you from getting anything done. You need to clean stuff out, automate, streamline with fewer handoffs.”

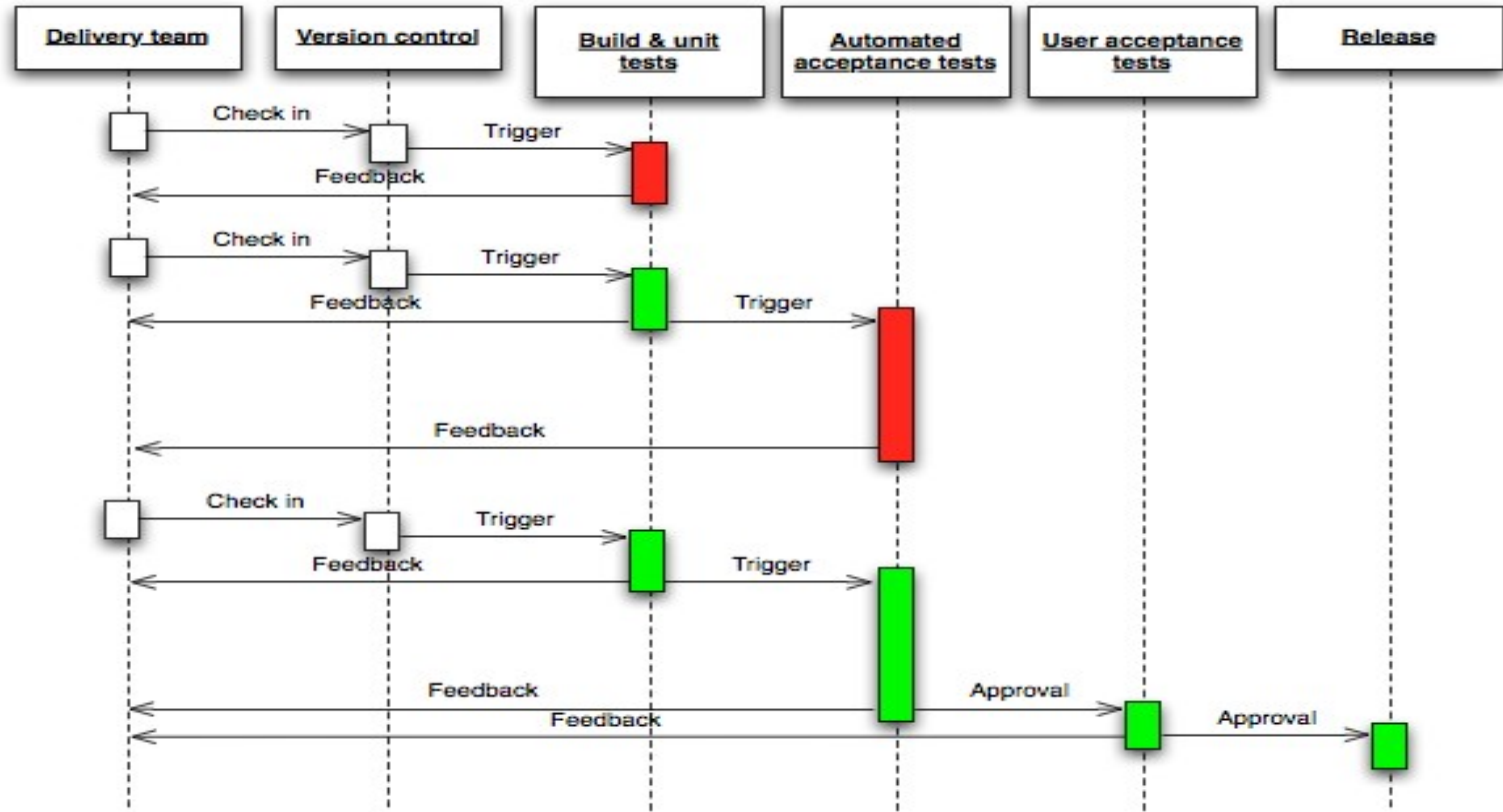

We can't all be Netflix, but..

Treat your servers as cattle rather than pets

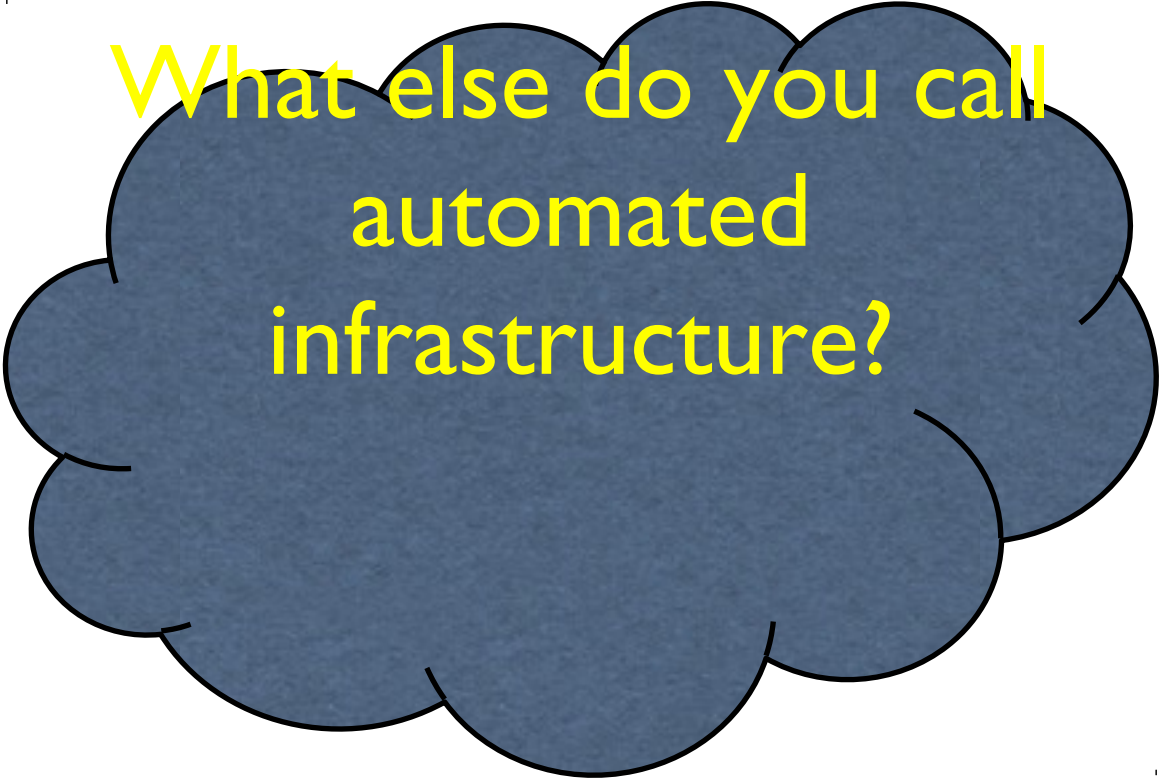

and be ready to slaughter some sacred cows

Continuous delivery

Do you need a cloud?

What else do you call automated infrastructure?

Wrapping up

Final word

DevOps Borat

@DEVOPS_BORAT

To make error is human. To propagate error to all server in automatic way is #devops.
